Camden. August 28th.

My own precious Louisa/

I was so glad to get another letter from you this morning & now write just one line to say that this delay of the marriage will not make any difference in our arrangements now, tho' it might have done so had we received the intelligence at an earlier period. It is certainly longer than we had any idea of being absent & we cannot help rather regretting it on that account, but as it is so near the time Charles does not see any sufficient reason for altering his plan of going next week. except that we propose not setting off till Tuesday & shall not therefore be with you till Wednesday evening. I believe it will be much better to make two days of the journey as we shall be so much less fatigued on our arrival & consequently so much better able to enjoy the meeting.
